Kenney: Give police the option to arrest for pot

New. City councilman is looking for ways to keep résumés clear of arrests for small amounts of pot.

After the first bill didn't take, Councilman Jim Kenney revised his plan to curb arrests for small amounts of marijuana.

In January, Kenney introduced legislation that would end the requirement to arrest offenders for possessing under an ounce of pot. Under the bill, the offender would still be sent to the district attorney's "Small Amount of Marijuana" program, which includes a three-hour drug-abuse class and a $300 fine, but they just wouldn't be arrested. They would be issued a summons and sent on their merry way.

But the bill ran into opposition from city leaders who felt the bill wasn't practical.

Quoted

"We will offer a perspective on it if and when there's a hearing before a council committee."

Mark McDonald, spokesperson for Mayor Michael Nutter

After a few amendments, Kenney introduced a new bill Thursday, which would essentially turn the small-amount possession into a civil violation instead of a criminal one.

Police would also have the choice to either arrest the offender or hand them a ticket and let them go. And the fine would be reduced from $300 to $25.

"And if someone can't produce ID, or has an outstanding warrant, possess a weapon, then [police] can arrest somebody, they don't have to hold everybody," Kenney said. "And right now they're holding everybody."

Kenney said the bill would keep more people out of jail and help keep their records clean.

"The fact that 5,000 people per year are getting a criminal record in this city, in this economy, with our poverty rate, is insane," he said.

Law secretary stole money from clients, says DA

Jasmine Torres, 39, was arrested Wednesday and charged with taking about $25,000 in cash and money order payments from 23 victims while working as a secretary at an immigration law firm on the 700 block of Allegheny Avenue, the DA's office said.

Torres, of the 3900 block of N. Sixth Street, allegedly took the funds from clients of the firm, but none of the payments ever made it to the law firm, and the clients did not receive the legal services they thought they were paying for, prosecutors said. METRO

Council lobbies for Dick Allen to join HOF

City Council passed a resolution Thursday advocating for former Phillies great Dick Allen's admittance into the National Baseball Hall of Fame.

The official resolution urges the Hall of Fame's "Golden Era Committee," which votes to enshrine retirees who are on the cusp but have not yet been honored, to elect Allen as part of the 2015 class.

Councilman Jim Kenney called Allen, a controversial figure who played for The Fightins from 1963 until 1969 and again from 1975 until 1976, "our Jackie Robinson."

Ruling. Police don't need warrants for cars

The Pennsylvania Supreme Court ruled this week that police officers must have "reasonable probable cause" to search a vehicle, but no longer require a warrant.

Prior to this decision, citizens could refuse if a police officer asked to search their cars.

Officers were only allowed to search cars if there were exigent circumstances. Federal agents don't need a warrant to search a citizen's car.

Now, officers only need reasonable probable cause to search a citizen's vehicle, under the ruling.

The decision stemmed from a 2010 Philadelphia case. METRO

Think twice. Corbett will support medical use of cannabis oil

Gov. Tom Corbett announced on Thursday that he has changed his stance on the use of medical products derived from marijuana.

Corbett will now support legislation to legalize the medical use of a marijuana extract, cannabidiol oil, to treat children with severe seizure problems, the Associated Press reported.

The move comes a day before State Sen. Daylin Leach (D-Montco/Delco) had planned to stage a sit-in protest involving families with children who suffer from seizure-related problems.

"I am grateful that the governor has moved off of his position and has finally seen the inhumanity of denying sick people the medicine that they need," Leach said. "I'm very proud of the families that stood by me and were willing to risk a sit-in to help their kids get healthy. … For them, this was a dramatic step, something way outside their comfort zone. And it worked."

Leach is the sponsor of SB 1182, the Compassionate Use of Medical Cannabis Act, along with Republican state Sen. Mike Folmer, a bill that calls for full legalization of medical marijuana use, not just cannabis oil. SAM NEWHOUSE

Change of heart

Leach told Metro he still doesn't know the details of what Corbett is proposing. But he's hopeful.

- "I'm hoping that in a bipartisan way, he will sit down with me and Sen. Folmer to negotiate a bill that is as broad as possible to help as many people as possible," he said.

Criminal mischief

Senior class prank nets 62 arrests

More than 60 students at Teaneck High School in Bergen County, N.J., were arrested on Thursday after police said they urinated in hallways, greased doorknobs and taped hot dogs to lockers after breaking into their school overnight.

Students told police it was their senior class prank.

Police responded to the school's burglar alarm around 2 a.m. They found desks overturned, broken chairs, graffiti, silly string and balloons, the Associated Press reported.

Twenty-four students who were 18 or older were charged with burglary and criminal mischief. The remaining juveniles were released to their parents. METRO

Jailtime. Threatening note led to fatal shooting: Defendant

On Thursday, a man apologized before he was sentenced for murder over an argument.

"To the family, I'm sorry I can't take back what happened," said Raheem Gonzalez, 22, before receiving a sentence of 15 to 31 years in prison. "I wasn't in a right state of mind. I was scared for my life. I'm not the same person I once was."

Gonzalez pleaded guilty to third-degree murder and attempted murder charges for fatally shooting to death Raymond Roman, 20, around 12:40 a.m. on Sept. 22, 2010, near the intersection of Kip and Ontario streets. He also shot Roman's brother, Xavier, 24, in the arm, leg and mouth.

Gonzalez claimed the brothers had previously beaten, robbed and shot him in the arm earlier in the day, then left a threatening note on his car implying they might hurt his mother.

Quoted

"No parent should have to organize their son's funeral."

Raymond Roman's father

Gonzalez said he got a street gun, and when he saw the Roman brothers, fired on them from fear for his life.

"I believe it, but it was problematic as a self-defense case, because he didn't see a gun before shooting," said Gonzalez' defense lawyer Jack McMahon.

Gonzalez was sentenced to 8 to 16 years for murder and 7 to 15 years for attempted murder. He received a reduced sentence because had no previous criminal record, according to Judge Jeffrey Minehart. SAM NEWHOUSE

House explodes in CC

A firefighter sprays the smoldering remains of a house that exploded on the 2300 block of Naudain Street in Center City early Thursday morning. The premises had been evacuated prior to the explosion. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Expect delays. Broad Street Run is Sunday

From Logan to the Navy Yard, thousands of runners will take to the street for the 35th annual Broad Street Run on Sunday.

But those not running should be aware of SEPTA detours. All bus routes that use or cross Broad Street will use detours.

Routes 3, 17, 29, 39, 64, 75, 79 and G will use cutback service on the eastern and western portion of their routes. Trolley Route 15 will operate with substitute bus service.

Due to traffic congestion, additional delays are expected around the city, especially on routes leaving the Olney Transportation Center.

Express trains will run on the Broad Street Line for race participants and those watching. Runners can show their official race bibs and ride on the BSL for free.

Delays are also expected on Friday for the Philadelphia Science Festival Carnival, Saturday's Rittenhouse Row Spring Festival and the Chestnut Hill Home and Garden Festival on Sunday. METRO

Child abuse

Man burned infant stepson's face: Police

Matthew Montgomery, 27, of the 1800 block of South Conestoga Street, was arrested Wednesday night for allegedly burning his 3-year-old stepson's face and right arm while the boy's mother was at work.

The boy also suffered a concussion and bruising but was in stable condition. METRO

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

TOM FOREMAN IS A POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN.

Basketball fans, players, politicians and social commentators are tearing their hair out over a question. Who shall be the new owner of the Los Angeles Clippers? The potential bidders list is already a Who's Who of fame and fortune: Oprah Winfrey, Matt Damon, Floyd Mayweather, Sean Combs, and even Snoop Dogg, or Snoop Lion, or whatever name it is that he signs on checks at the moment.

Now, to be sure, it is not entirely clear that any new landlord is in the offing for the Clippers. The current owner, Donald Sterling, has been chastened by the NBA and reviled as a racist, but whether the league can force him to sell the team or if such a move would stand up in court is anyone's guess.

Still, even if he fouls out, how can we be sure the next owner won't also stumble down Sterling Avenue some day with an embarrassing or crass revelation?

Here's how: Let's all buy the team! I'll get a big bucket of some sort, and we'll each kick in a dollar. Then we'll hook up with the crowd-funding site Kickstarter, become an Internet sensation, and Bob's-your-uncle, we'll have a stake in the NBA. Talk about diversity of ownership!

Granted, with millions of us holding shares, I guess the Owner's Box for home games might be a bit tight. We'd probably have to work out some sort of lottery. I'm not sure which one of us would get to hoist the trophy should we win a championship, but since this is my idea, I'll volunteer. I'm sure no one will object.

And there is the chance we might find our own ranks infiltrated by some bigots, criminals and/or serial killers. But I've worked that out, too. Unlike the traditional "single owner" model, we could boot out thousands of people for their indiscretions, and still play on.

It is easy for people to find problems in our world, but simple solutions like this are a rarity. I don't see how this can possibly go wrong. But then I suppose that's what Donald Sterling once thought, too.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author.

Incidents increase

Military sexual assault reports jumped 50 percent last year

Reported sexual assaults in the U.S. military jumped 50 percent last year amid a high-profile crackdown on the problem, the Pentagon said on Thursday. Officials hailed the spike as a sign that victims are increasingly confident the crime will be prosecuted.

Despite the increased focus on the problem over the past year, however, the military has continued to face embarrassing incidents in which officers have been accused of tolerating sexual misconduct rather than fighting it.

The annual study found that reported sexual assaults in the military jumped 50 percent to 5,061 in the 2013 fiscal year that ended on Sept. 30, a figure in line with preliminary numbers released by the Pentagon in December.

By comparison, the Pentagon's Sexual Assault Prevention and Response office said 3,374 cases of sexual assault were reported in the 2012 fiscal year. REUTERS

Microsoft rescues XP users with emergency Internet Explorer fix

Fast. Microsoft was under pressure to move quickly as users were told to consider using alternatives.

Microsoft is helping the estimated hundreds of millions of customers still running Windows XP, which it stopped supporting earlier this month, by providing an emergency update to fix a critical bug in its Internet Explorer browser.

Microsoft Corp. rushed to create the fix after learning of the bug in the operating system over the weekend when cybersecurity firm FireEye Inc. warned that a sophisticated group of hackers had exploited the bug in an attack campaign dubbed "Operation Clandestine Fox."

It was the first high-profile threat to emerge after Microsoft stopped providing support for its 13-year-old XP operating software on April 8.

Microsoft on Wednesday initially said it would not provide the remedy to Windows XP users because it had stopped supporting the product. But on Thursday, as Microsoft started releasing the fix for the bug through its automated Windows Update system, a company spokeswoman said the remedy also would be pushed out to XP customers.

At the end of last week, FireEye initially uncovered attacks involving recent versions of Windows that are still supported by Microsoft.

Quoted

"We decided to fix it, fix it fast, and fix it for all our customers. ... There have been a very small number of attacks based on this particular vulnerability and concerns were, frankly, overblown."

Adrienne Hall, spokeswoman, said on Microsoft's official blog

Then, three days ago, it began identifying attacks on Windows XP, which users would not necessarily have been able to thwart if Microsoft had not decided to roll out the update to XP users in addition to other customers. REUTERS

Ford takes leave of absence

Toronto Mayor Rob Ford has informed city staff he is taking a leave of absence, but has not said when he plans to return, a city spokeswoman said on Thursday. The Globe and Mail reported it had seen a video that was shot last week and showed Ford using what appeared to be drugs. REUTERS / GETTY IMAGES

Malaysia releases flight report

Malaysia released a preliminary report on Flight MH370 on Thursday in which it recommended that the U.N. body overseeing global aviation consider introducing a system for tracking commercial aircraft in real time.

The document, dated April 9, also provided fresh details of attempts the authorities in Kuala Lumpur made to locate the plane and of the exact flight path it is believed to have taken. REUTERS

US health officials to FDA: Treat e-cigs like real cigarettes

E-cigarette industry. The Big Cities Health Coalition sent a letter urging an FDA crackdown on electronic cigarettes.

The FDA's proposed rules, which require a health warning on e-cigarettes and ban vending machine sales and free samples, are subject to a public-comment period of 75 days. / GETTY IMAGES

A group of urban health officials on Thursday urged the Food and Drug Administration to go beyond the regulations it proposed last week for e-cigarettes and treat them like regular cigarettes.

In an open letter to FDA Commissioner Margaret Hamburg, the Big Cities Health Coalition (BCHC) noted that the FDA has nothing in its proposed regulations that would govern the advertising of e-cigarettes, which it said often targets the youth market.

The agency did, however, propose banning sales of e-cigarettes to people under the age of 18.

According to the BCHC, there were "gaps" in the rules that need to be filled.

"We urge you follow our lead and use your full authority to apply all current tobacco regulations to e-cigarettes," the 11 public health officials said in their letter. "The FDA must move quickly to address the growing concern about youth use beyond setting a minimum age requirement to purchase e-cigarettes." REUTERS

TV not sharing info on pol ads

Television stations across the United States that have profited from an unprecedented amount of political advertising in recent years are not properly disclosing information about those ads online, public interest groups said on Thursday.

Two public interest groups filed complaints against 11 TV stations, telling regulators the broadcasters reported incomplete information on the Internet about political ads in what remains a relatively common lag across the country.

As political parties and outside spending groups spent millions on advertising to sway voters in the 2012 election, the Federal Communications Commission in August that year began requiring TV stations affiliated with the top four national networks to post details about political ads in a Web database. Group to sue US over changes to eagle protection rules

Conservationists plan to sue the U.S. government over new rules they say loosen protection for eagles killed by wind farm turbines, arguing they threaten decades of protection that saved the bald eagle, America's national emblem, from extinction. The American Bird Conservancy notified the administration on Wednesday of its intent to sue over the changes, which grant wind farms permission to kill eagles accidentally for a period of 30 years without having to apply for a new permit, rather than five years as previously required. U.S. law bans killing bald and golden eagles without a permit, except for narrow purposes such as scientific research.

Carcinogens. Are UV lamps in nail salons a skin cancer risk?

The ultraviolet lamps used in some nail salons to dry and cure nail polish deliver the same hazardous rays as tanning beds, but it would take many manicures to actually cause damage, suggests a new study.

After testing 17 different lamps in nail salons, researchers calculated that it would take between eight and 208 visits—depending on the machine—to damage skin cells in a way that raises cancer risk.

"I wouldn't tell a patient to stop going unless they were going multiple times a month," lead author Dr. Lyndsay Shipp from Georgia Regents University in Augusta, Georgia, said.

Exposure to ultraviolet (UV) radiation is a risk factor for most skin cancers, according to the American Cancer Society. Natural sunlight and UV lamps used for tanning give off the harmful rays, as do the small lamps used to speed drying in nail salons.

Previous studies have looked at the polish-drying UV lamps and suggested the rays may be powerful enough to cause damage, Shipp's team notes, but those studies had flaws.

REUTERS

How much?

UV-A is one of three types of UV rays. It ages the skin to cause wrinkles and breaks DNA strands within skin cells, which can lead to cancer.

- The lamps tested by the researchers differed in their power levels, but generally UV lamps with higher wattages put out higher levels of UV-A radiation.
- Based on a calculation of how much UV-A radiation exposure is needed to damage DNA, the researchers found that it would take, on average, 11 uses for the devices to deliver enough UV-A to raise cancer risk.

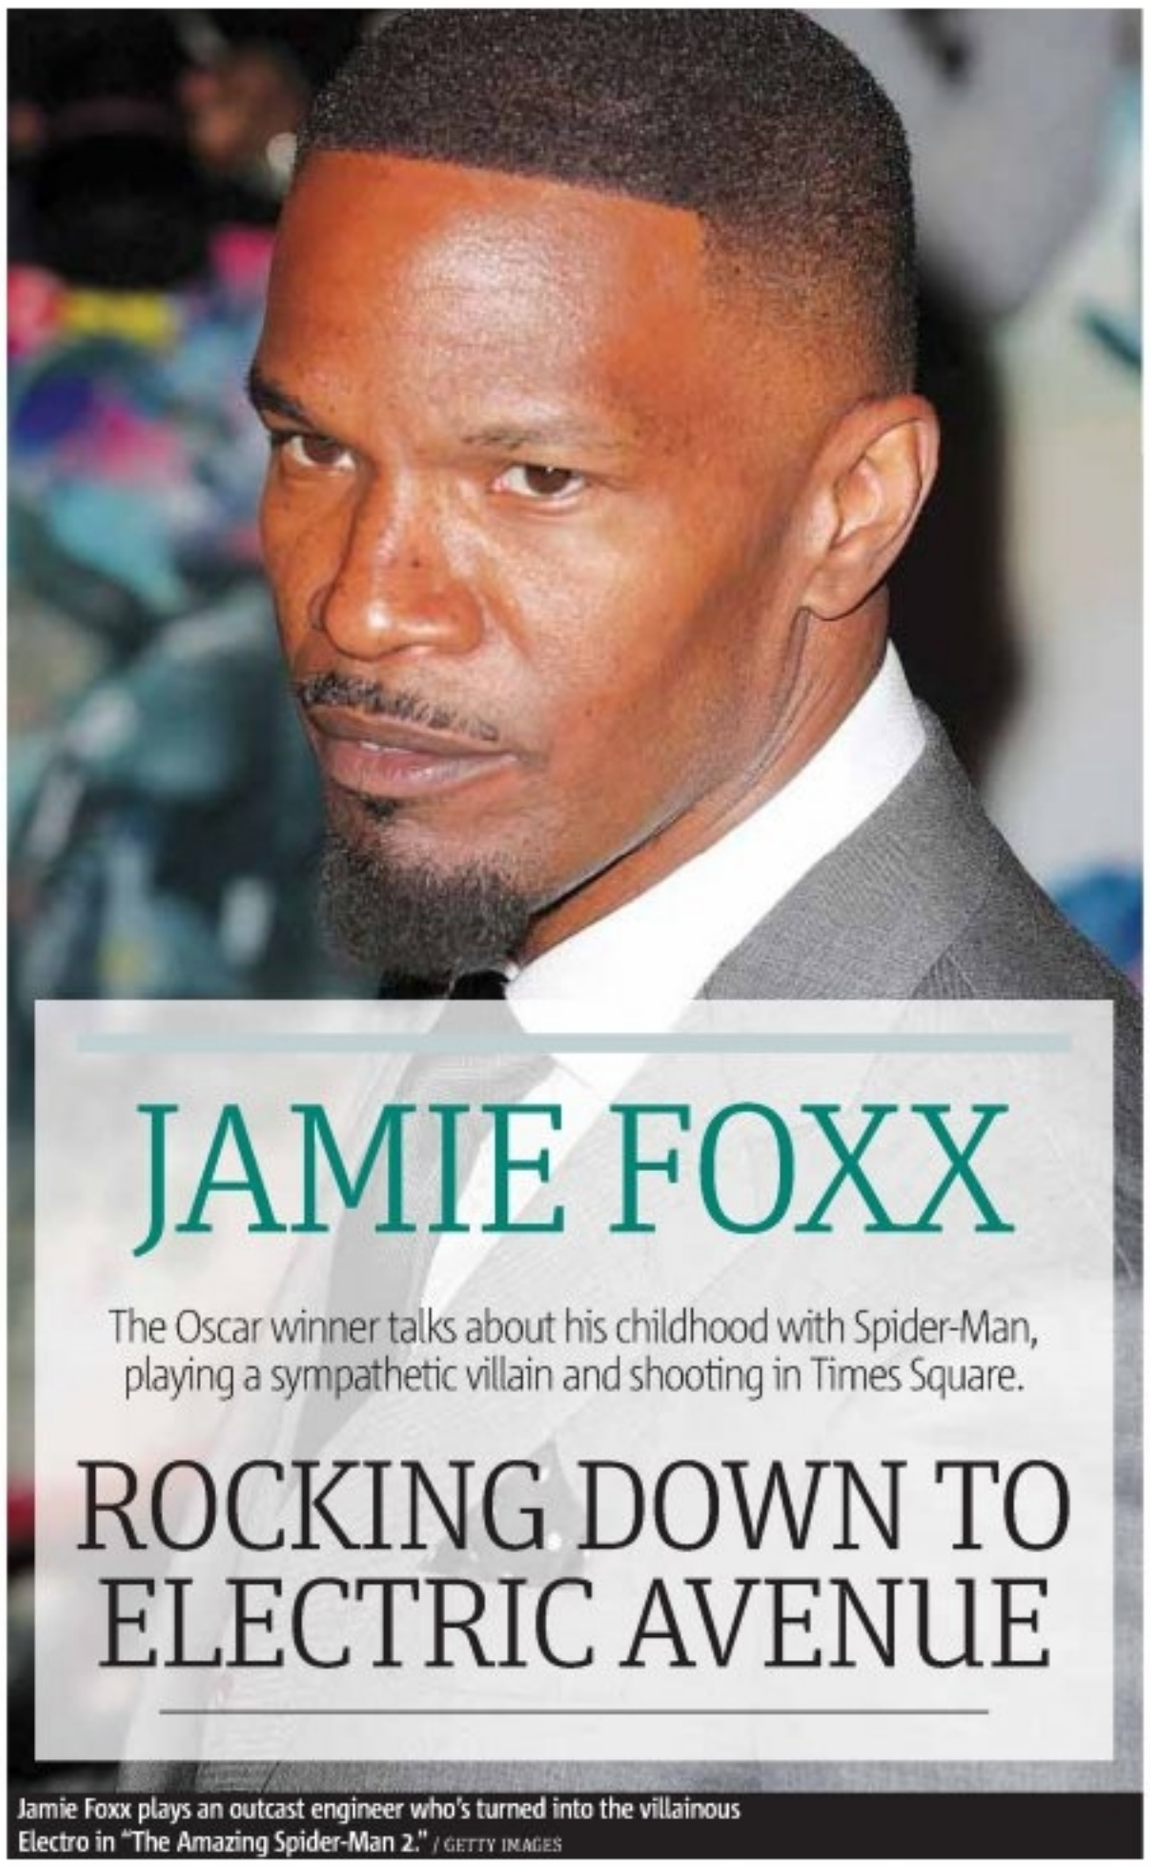
King of comedy

Cutting loose

Foxx got his start as a cast member of "In Living Color," and most of his first films were broad comedies. Does he ever want to return to his sillier early work?

"Oh man, got to," he says. "I was on 'Jimmy Fallon' the other night, thinking, 'If I can just get back to the comedy.' But it has to be the right one. I've been pitching stuff to Will [Smith], to Kevin Hart, all these guys. If I can grab a hold of something, I'd love to do it."



JAMIE FOXX

The Oscar winner talks about his childhood with Spider-Man, playing a sympathetic villain and shooting in Times Square.

ROCKING DOWN TO ELECTRIC AVENUE

Jamie Foxx plays an outcast engineer who's turned into the villainous Electro in "The Amazing Spider-Man 2." / GETTY IMAGES

Since 2004's one-two-punch of "Collateral" and "Ray" — he won an Oscar for Best Actor for his work in the latter — Jamie Foxx hasn't had too many chances to cut loose, professionally. In "The Amazing Spider-Man 2" he gets to have fun — sort of. As Max Dillon, a frustrated loner engineer who is turned into the Spider-Man's foil, Electro, Foxx gets to play the villain, if a tragic, sympathetic one.

What is your experience with Spider-Man?
There were only three networks when I was a kid. When "The Electric Company" came on, and Morgan Freeman was the host, they would play "Spider-Man" in between the educational stuff.

Were you reluctant to play the villain?
No! Not at all. And electricity — you can't really kill electricity. I'm hoping if they do "The Sinister Six" [the super-team of villains] that you'll be able to see him fully turn into the villain. Villains get to have more fun.

He's a very sympathetic bad guy — at least initially.
Yeah. That's what's great about the "Spider-Man" franchise: All of the villains start from another place. They're misunderstood. They're not like, "I'm going to take over the world!"

The producers have said your performance as Drew Bundini Brown in "Ali" was one reason they went with you. Did you draw on that character at all?
Maybe the look, but I drew on this guy I'd known in my community who walked around in this military jacket and was quiet and very smart. He lived with his mom. It was a little more animated in this film. Had it been a real art-house drama, maybe I would have dialed it down a bit. But I drew on him. He's a guy who's excited about Spider-Man — like, grown-man excitement. That's weird.

Suiting up

The look

Some of the costume is created with special effects. What did they actually do to you on set?
It was blue silicone over me. Then they would CGI the rest. It was four and a half hours of this s— every day. It was cool, though.

There's a set piece in Times Square, some of which you shot in the actual Times Square. Did people recognize you under the costume?
I had a hoodie on. When people found out it was me — New York is hilarious. People came up and were like, "Yo, Foxx, here's my mix tape."

More than just superheroes

May and June. From May through August, moviegoers can feast upon a wide variety of cinematic junk.

'Godzilla'

(May 16)
High-concept premise: The fire-breathing, rampaging lizard of Japanese cinema is back — only it's nothing like the campy 1998 one that no one likes because it's just awful.
Superpower: The cast is nothing to sneeze at: Bryan Cranston, Elizabeth Olsen, Sally Hawkins, David Strathairn and, holy crap, Juliette Binoche is in this? The tone is as serious as the Japanese version of the 1954 original, which is quite grim.
Weakness: Director Gareth Edwards' "Monsters" was an attempt at a subversive monster movie that ended up packed with indie cliches. So this could get too dour. Ambition is cool and everything, but let's not forget, this is still freakin' Godzilla.

'X-Men: Days of Future Past'

(May 23)
High-concept premise: The X-Men Babies prequels soldier on, and if you're sick of young and dashing Magneto, don't worry: Wolverine and many others from the first three films have been shoehorned into this.
Superpower: Topping even that of "Godzilla," this has the best cast of any summer movie, with Michael Fassbender, Jennifer Lawrence, Patrick Stewart, Ian McKellen, plus Peter Dinklage and Omar Sy ("The Intouchables").
Weakness: This sounds like a lot of characters to deal with only 130 minutes. Good luck with that.

'Maleficent'

(May 30)
High-concept premise: It's the "Sleeping Beauty" story, but from the perspective of the villain (Angelina Jolie) who turns into a dragon at the end.
Superpower: "Maleficent" is one of Disney's most visually striking villains, and Jolie is hammy enough to bring the menace without garnering too much sympathetic.
Weakness: Let's hope this doesn't turn into another fun-real, serious twist on a movie that used to be fun.

Zac Efron takes his shirt off in "Neighbors." / UNIVERSAL PICTURES

Party down

'Neighbors'

(May 9)
High-concept premise: Seth Rogen and Rose Byrne play suburbanites peeved at the frat that's just moved next door (run by Zac Efron).
Superpower: Director Nicholas Stoller made "Forgetting Sarah Marshall," one of the better Judd Apatow films.
Weakness: Is Zac Efron funny? "That Awkward Moment" would indicate no.

'22 Jump Street'

(June 13)
High-concept premise: Hope you liked the 2012 movie "21 Jump Street," which had zero affection for the '80s TV show and just played it as a comedy and a showcase for Channing Tatum's surprising comic chops.
Superpower: It's really easy to like the first one because it's actually pretty great. And filmmakers Phil Lord and Chris Miller are on a roll: Three months ago they brought us the bizarrely overachieving "The Lego Movie."
Weakness: Could Lord and Miller have burned out? This sounds like a repeat, although the addition of Richard Grieco is a nice touch.

'Transformers: Age of Extinction'

(June 27)
High-concept premise: Shia LaBeouf and that model he was banging are no more — the franchise about giant robots with millions of headache-inducing parts has decided to move on to Marky Mark.
Superpower: "Transformers" now comes with 100 percent less Shia.
Weakness: Mark Wahlberg looks awful solemn in the press images, considering this is a Michael Bay movie about BattleBots.

Summer movie preview continues on page 18.

ELLAR COLTRANE STARS IN "BOYHOOD." / IFC

'Boyhood'

(July 11)
Shot over 12 years, Richard Linklater brings us the story about a kid (Ellar Coltrane, cast in 2002, when he was 7 years old).

Also coming

"Life Itself," the documentary on Roger Ebert, will make you cry (July 11); "Love is Strange" stars Alfred Molina and John Lithgow as partners forced to live apart (Aug. 22).

July and August. Up for your enjoyment are apes, talking raccoons and ScarJo controlling the universe.

'Dawn of the Planet of the Apes'

(July 11)
High-concept premise: Further ignoring the nutty slave allegory back story from the 1970s "Apes" movie cycle, this second in the series reboot finds Andy Serkis' CGI chimp rebel witnessing the final throes of humanity.
Superpower: The "Apes" movies have potential for searing commentary, as the originals thoroughly exploited.
Weakness: The first, "Rise," missed all opportunities to express anything deep. But it was cool and well-crafted.

Paint it black

'Sin City: A Dame to Kill For'

(Aug. 22)
High-concept premise: It only took nine years, but Frank Miller's noir comics get another movie.
Superpower: This time it brings into the fray Eva Green, who ealier tore into the other Miller sequel "300: Rise of an Empire."
Weakness: Miller has aged into a reactionary crank.

Mickey Rourke revisits his nine-year-old triumph in "Sin City: A Dame to Kill For." / THE WEINSTEIN COMPANY

'Guardians of the Galaxy'

(Aug. 1)
High-concept premise: You know at the end of "Thor: The Dark World" where they cut to Benicio del Toro in a goofy costume and you were like, "This picture thinks I'm supposed to know who this is," and then a few nerds hooted? Well, he's in this Marvel cinematic effort about superheroes in space, which includes a talking raccoon.
Superpower: This features actual superpowers — and Chris Pratt.
Weakness: When the comic book movie burnout comes, it's going to be bloody.

'Lucy'

(Aug. 8)
High-concept premise: Scarlett Johansson is poisoned by a drug that gives her increasing command over her brain and the universe.
Superpower: So it's "Limitless," but as an action film made by Eurotrash auteur Luc Besson and starring that actress who was in the amazing "Under the Skin"? That sounds unbelievably awesome.
Weakness: Besson works fast and doesn't usually care about craft. This could waste a promising premise — or it could just be modest, slimy, weirdly right-wing fun, à la "Taken."

'Leprechaun: Origins'

(Aug. 29)
High-concept premise: If you saw "Leprechaun" and thought, "What are his origins, and could he be darker or sadder or both?" and also wished he was played by a wrestler (Dylan Postl) — then giddyap.
Superpower: This has to be a joke.
Weakness: What if it's not a joke?

The latest reboot in the franchise sees Spider-Man (Andrew Garfield) having way more fun. / NIKO TAVERNISE

Second time's the charm for Spidey

Web-slinger. Unlike its predecessor, this "Spider-Man" is only occasionally an emo drag.

It has its problems, but "The Amazing Spider-Man 2" easily improves upon its predecessor. Returning director Mark Webb has grown more confident in the action genre. But he's also gotten better at finding a coherent, enjoyable tone, and one that's not a mirror of the deceptively light one rocked by Sam Raimi in his superior, only decade-old trilogy. If the 2012 remake was clumsy and emo — like a sludgy, overly sincere cover of a rock classic — this one better recalls its origins as a colorful, fun comic about a young'un swinging from building to building around the five boroughs via webs.

Granted, it's not exactly sunny. Peter has fully embraced the Spidey do-gooder persona, which has left girlfriend Gwen Stacy (Emma Stone) feeling neglected. She dumps him, but instead of drowning in sad music on his iPod — although he does that a bit — he immerses himself in crime fighting. His enemy this time is Electro (Jamie Foxx), an overlooked engineer accidentally turned into a being of pure energy. But he's no mere baddie: Largely ignored throughout his life, Electro is a sympathetic kind of lost soul.

The film attempts to charm its way out of sloppy plotting, occasional forehead-slapping inanities and other deficiencies. But unlike the film that preceded it, it more or less succeeds overall.

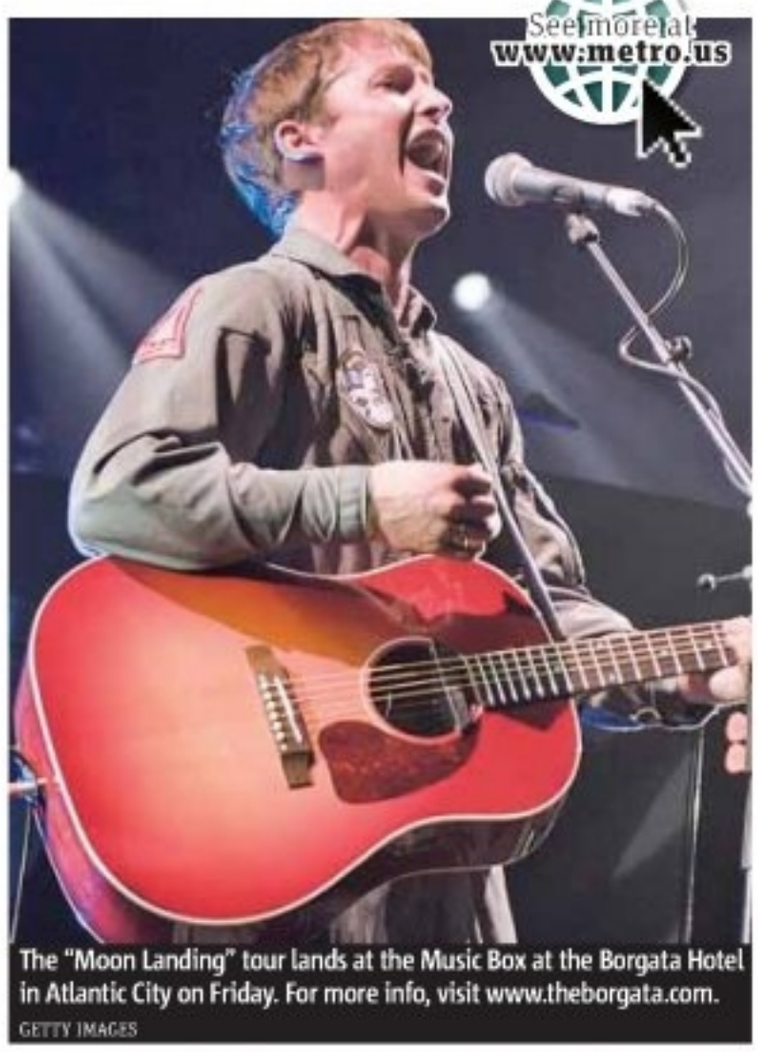
Coming in for a 'Landing'

To be Blunt. The singer who made his name with "You're Beautiful" has some harsh words for critics and new words for himself.



The "Moon Landing" tour lands at the Music Box at the Borgata Hotel in Atlantic City on Friday. For more info, visit www.theborgata.com.

James Blunt has come to terms with the success that made him a household name almost a decade ago. And with his new album, "Moon Landing," he says he was finally able to produce a collection of songs that is almost a logical extension of his 2004 debut, "Back to Bedlam."

"This album is the album I would have written and recorded if the other albums hadn't sold the way they did," he says.

The albums selling well had a strange effect on Blunt, and when the topic of criticism comes up, the singer reveals his acid tongue in a hilariously lightning-fast rant.

"I don't sing songs about how big and strong I am," he says. "I was in the Army for six years and I know how perfectly strong I am. I was in the war and I know how hard and rough it is to get in a serious fight. So instead of singing about that, I sing about my weakness. … Any critique you have is probably from one guy in his bedroom with his trousers around his ankles in the shadows, feeling brave as a result."

It's taken a while for Blunt to come to this level of acceptance.

"My first record I cut to try and get a record deal, and I did," he says. "Then being on that indie label as I was, it became mainstream with one song that the whole world knows. And because of that I wrote a reactionary album. … And then the third album, I did embrace it more — there's fun to be had as a pop star, and so I wrote songs for my arenas. … But with all the fun … it wasn't nearly as fulfilling as when you are writing something much more personal."

Back to 'Back to'

Houston, do you copy?

For "Moon Landing," Blunt enlisted Tom Rothrock, who produced "Back to Bedlam," the album that spawned the "one song that the whole world knows" Blunt speaks of, "You're Beautiful." One song on the new album that feels especially personal is "Miss America," a tribute to Whitney Houston.

"What was interesting and tragic about her was that the insight into her life overtook her talent," says Blunt. "Amy Winehouse was something similar … where we spectate to such a degree that we almost become players in their downfall, because every time we buy a magazine to read about their worst moments … another paparazzi is sent out; and with every new lens pointed in their faces, I think their world becomes that much smaller and their problems much more intense."

'Come and Play': New Works by Victor Atkins

Friday–June 17

First Friday. Abstract expressionist painter returns for his first show in 26 years.

Victor Atkins still gets occasional messages from owners of his paintings — or their insurance brokers. Often, they're trying to determine the value of the abstract expressionist paintings he was creating in the 1980s.

They might be asking the wrong guy.

In that period the New York artist often threw claw hammers at his own paintings in fits of despair.

"There was always this thing out there that was just unreachable. But I went after it, because I wanted something really important to do," says Atkins, sitting in his studio at the Crane Arts building in Kensington. "It's kind of an old story in the art world, but eventually I felt like I was making paintings that people bought because it matched their couch. It was strictly a business, and I lost the joy in it."

Atkins disappeared from the art scene, but has now reemerged in Philly with his first new collection since 1988. The new show, "Come and Play," will open on Friday at the White Stone Gallery in Fishtown.

The 15 new works range from eight-inch details to massive seven-foot canvases. "I don't know how to explain this, but I just woke up in the middle of the night and I knew I needed to paint again," he says.

The new paintings are still in the abstract expressionist mode of Atkins' youth. But the architectural rigidity of his early paintings has been nixed, making way for bold splashes of color and playful anthropomorphic characters that one might expect to find in a children's story. And Atkins indeed wants to weave a narrative for the viewer — a story of renewal and insuppressible inner exuberance.

"I never gave myself much freedom before — much room to really mess up and make a fool of myself," he says. "But I finally allowed myself to go there, and now I just feel like, yeah, OK, I've discovered something that will speak to people. It will also turn a lot of other people off, but I just care less about that now."

Atkins' "PS127" is a large-scale acrylic and oil on canvas. / PROVIDED

Lock your doors. Philly will try to beat the record for world's largest bar crawl on Saturday

MilkBoy is one of the stops on The Crawl, Saturday from noon to 8 p.m. Tickets are $10-$25. / TONY WOOD

Drinkers, get your aspirin ready. The day after the world's largest bar crawl is going to be a rough one — at least, if Ray Sheehan of Philly2Night.com has anything to do with it. Philly2Night, along with UpcomingEvents.com, is hosting Saturday's "The Crawl," designed to break the Guinness World Record set by Kansas City, Missouri, last summer.

"The fact that Philly did not hold the record for this did not sit well with us," Sheehan said. He's hoping to draw 15,000 participants to bars all over the city. The crawl raises money for kids' charity Young Variety and the Philadelphia Fraternal Order of Police Lodge #5.

On special

Bottoms up

Sponsors include Skyy Vodka, Espolon Tequila, Wild Turkey American Honey, Corona, Modelo and, somewhat ironically, City Fitness, among others. Drink specials from the alcohol sponsors will be offered at the participating bars, along with water stations. Keep hydrated, crawlers.

To break the record, Philly needs over 4,885 people to stop at 10 bars. The good news, for those of us considering fleeing the city that day, is in order for their attendance to be counted, participants must drink a five-ounce non-alcoholic beverage at each bar (which earns them a wristband scan so the organizers can keep track).

Drinkers can meander to more than 100 bars, scattered throughout pretty much every neighborhood in the city.

Pam Killian of McFadden's jumped at the chance to join this (potentially) historic event. "I think this idea is really cool," she says. "It's innovative. Plus it's very creative marketing for us."

Dolce & Gabbana jailed for tax fraud

Can we expect to see some orange jumpsuit-inspired looks in Dolce & Gabbana's next collection? Fashion designers Domenico Dolce and Stefano Gabbana are heading to prison to serve time for tax evasion. The fashion designers were arrested for owing millions to the Italian government.

They'll be trading their luxe life and living in the slammer for 18 months. Shocked? So is their lawyer, who is still proclaiming their innocence. "I am speechless," their lawyer, Massimo Dinoia, stated, according to Yahoo! News. "We are all shocked. The judgment is inexplicable, and we will appeal."

Information hasn't yet been released regarding when their sentences will start or who will oversee the line during the time the designers are in prison. EMILY LAURENCE

Avril Lavigne and Chad Kroeger trashed their hotel room

Avril Lavigne's and Chad Kroeger's marriage is one made in Canadian heaven, but not in housekeeping's.

Per a report in Life & Style, the couple trashed their room during their stay at Sixty Hotel in Beverly Hills. "It was a complete nightmare," a source told the magazine. "One evening, Chad had too much to drink at the hotel bar and mocked a waitress. Their room was left in complete disarray. It looked like a disaster and took housekeeping a long time to clean up!"

And somewhere, '70s rock 'n' roll stars are weeping at the hotel-destroying-anctics of today's rock 'n' roll stars.

Did a masseuse split up Robin Thicke and Paula Patton?

New details are emerging about what caused the split between Robin Thicke and Paula Patton, and signs point to another woman — a masseuse identified by Star magazine as "Jasmine" with whom Thicke and Patton had allegedly been carrying on a three-way relationship, sources claim. Things apparently went sour when Patton found out that Thicke was spending time with Jasmine on his own. "Paula felt betrayed and humiliated by both Robin and Jasmine," the source says. "These were two people she thought she could trust the most, but in the end, everything backfired on her. Robin pushed Paula to allow Jasmine into the bedroom with them in order to spice up their sex life, and she reluctantly agreed in an attempt to keep him happy." But evidently that agreement didn't last, as the source says Patton soon banned Jasmine from their bedroom, a development her husband apparently didn't follow through on. Thicke's reps, for their part, categorically deny the reports.

Franco comes clean on Lohan affair

James Franco is willing to admit that he kissed Lindsay Lohan a few times 10 years ago, but he insists he doesn't belong on her list of famous sexual conquests. "It's a lie. I will swear on my mother's life that I never had sex with her," Franco tells Howard Stern during an interview. "I will swear on anything you ask that I have never had sex with Lindsay Lohan. All right, we maybe kissed. It was lame. I can't believe she put me on that private list; she's so delusional."

Horoscope

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Get serious about your career goals. The position you desire is there for the taking. Get working to obtain whatever qualifications you need.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Things may not turn out as you expected. Avoid an emotional outburst by taking a step back, and look at the facts objectively.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Rumors and speculation could seriously hurt your reputation. Choose your confidants carefully, or you could have a real problem.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Examine your motives before offering your leadership services. The situation should be of benefit to all concerned, not just to you.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. You need to work on solitary projects today. Keep a low profile. Confrontations are likely if you are trying to deal with friends.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. This will be an educational day for you. Be prepared to listen to people with more experience. You could learn about strategies that can improve your future.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Carefully deal with authority figures on legal or health issues. Ask questions and obtain the necessary information.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Tensions will mount if your intentions are misunderstood. Be considerate toward others, but clear and concise.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. A prospective career move should be put on hold for the moment. Your peers will be glad to give you a hand if you are willing to ask for help.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. It's time for pampering. You will feel revived if you get together with someone you love. A change of scenery will do you good.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. A current personal dilemma should be shared. If a family situation has deteriorated, an outside perspective may shed light.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Delve into unfamiliar territory. Keep your mind open to new experiences. Lucrative possibilities could be the result of an educational trip. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Don't let the bad triumph

Re: 'These saints are marching in a little early' (Metro, April 30)
I have to feel a little sad for letter writer Charles Hall. It's almost like he's letting the bad guys win. He has admitted that he is a "nonbelieving former Catholic." I don't mean to pick on Mr. H. here. Rather, I'd like to highlight something that is bothering me: good people turning away from their faiths because of the unjust acts of other people. It is horrible what happened to the abuse victims, the years of trauma and suffering. But our faith is our foundation. People will always try to shake that foundation and bring us down.
ANTHONY LA ROSE, VIA EMAIL

Everyone's a little racist

The NBA made the wrong call on banning Clippers owner Donald Sterling. As an American citizen by birth and a proud black American at that, I thought the NBA was wrong to ban owner Donald Sterling for life, because the reality is that we all make racist comments and discriminate against each other depending on the circumstances. Whites discriminate, blacks discriminate, Hispanics discriminate, and so do others. We are living in an imperfect world. Mr. Sterling should fight this ban.

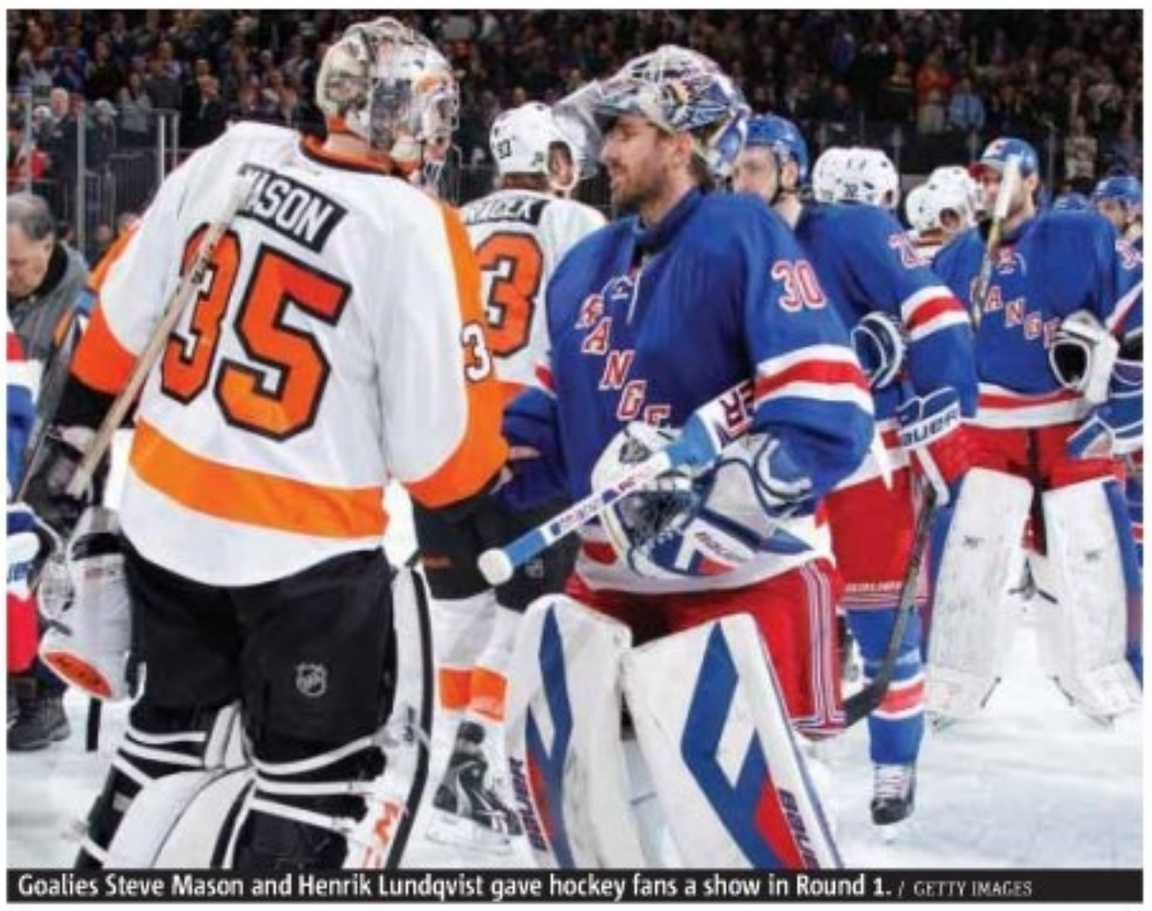
Kentucky Derby Saturday

California Chrome (5-2) is the morning-line favorite heading into the 140th running of the Kentucky Derby this Saturday at Churchill Downs (6:24 p.m.). Ridden by jockey Victor Espinoza, Chrome has won his last four starts and should break well from post position 5.

Flyers can hold heads high after Game 7 loss

NHL. The future is bright for the Flyers, even after Wednesday's bitter loss to the Rangers.



Goalies Steve Mason and Henrik Lundqvist gave hockey fans a show in Round 1. / GETTY IMAGES

It was certainly a tough way to end a season.

The Flyers lost to the hated Rangers in seven games. And moreover, former Flyers across the NHL were packing their bags for the second round. Like Mike Richards and Jeff Carter in Los Angeles, who teamed up to overcome a 3-0 deficit against the Sharks (replicating what the Flyers did in 2010). Or former Flyers franchise goalie Ilya Bryzgalov, who filled in for the Minnesota Wild, another team that advanced Wednesday night.

But the truth is, the Flyers started their season at the bottom of the standings. Though they didn't advance to face the Penguins, they certainly completed a turnaround.

"I think we do have to be proud of what we did," Claude Giroux said. "Last place and being able to come back, everybody got back on the same page. We had a lot of fun doing it and making the playoffs. Right now it stings a lot that we can't be in the second round."

It's as if the Flyers ran out of time. If only there was a little more regular season for the squad to fine-tune. If only they had a few more minutes to chase that tying goal in Madison Square Garden in Game 7.

"I think we can definitely be proud of what this group accomplished considering what kind of start we had to the regular season," Steve Mason, who had 30 saves in Game 7, said. "We put ourselves in a pretty big hole. The character that every single one of the guys in this locker room showed, to be able to battle back and find a way to get back into the playoffs and force a Game 7 here. ... This group is a lot of fun to play with, and I am looking forward to growing with them in the future."

It's difficult to shift gears from trying to win a Stanley Cup to packing up your locker in a matter of minutes. But that's the NHL, and a reality now for the Flyers.

"Nobody in this locker room was ready to pack it in," Mason said. "It's tough to put into words right now, what you feel. It's a long series and in one game, boom, it's over."

"Everybody feels lousy, obviously," coach Craig Berube said. "I'm proud of our players. They went through a lot this year. We were stuck in a hole for awhile and they battled out of it. We stuck together and went to a Game 7. They are a great bunch of guys with a lot of character."

Round 1 losers

Believe it or not, the Sixers are the most recent Philly team to advance past the first round.

- Jan. 4, 2014: The Eagles couldn't come back against New Orleans in the 2014 NFC Divisional round, losing 26-24.
- Oct. 7, 2011: The Phillies lost the 2011 NLDS, a series that ended with a 1-0 loss in Game 5.
- May 10, 2012: The No. 8 Sixers upset the No. 1 Bulls in six games in the 2012 first round, and took the Celtics to seven games a round later.

Giroux honored as Hart Trophy finalist

NHL. Claude Giroux could join Flyers greats Bobby Clarke and Eric Lindros as MVP recepient.

After his spectacular play all regular season long, Flyers captain, leading scorer and emotional spark plug Claude Giroux has been honored by being named a finalist for the Hart Memorial Trophy, given each year to the player deemed as most valuable to his team.

Giroux joins two other finalists, Pittsburgh's Sidney Crosby and Anaheim's Ryan Getzlaf.

Giroux, 26, tied a career high with 28 goals and also added 58 assists for 86 points. He finished third in the NHL in scoring behind Crosby and Getzlaf.

The savvy center would clearly trade any hardware for a date with the Penguins in the second round of the Stanley Cup playoffs, but the fact that the Flyers were able to contend for a playoff spot and push the Rangers to the brink in seven games is a testament to his leadership.

"On our bench we were positive that we were going to tie it up," Giroux said after the 2-1 loss. "We did get our chances, but it just didn't go in."

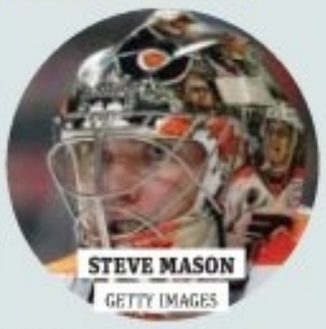
Amazing Mason



STEVE MASON
GETTY IMAGES

Mason a star despite Flyers Game 7 loss

The long list of failed experiments at goalie for the Flyers will certainly not contain Steve Mason's name.

All season long and in Wednesday's Game 7, Mason made brilliant saves and gave the Flyers a chance to win.

"He kept us alive so many times," Jakub Voracek said. "It's good to have him on our team."

If nothing else, Flyers fans can look forward to stability in net heading into next season.

"From the time I took over till now, he has mentally developed into a really good goalie," coach Craig Berube said. "He's had the ability." EVAN MACY

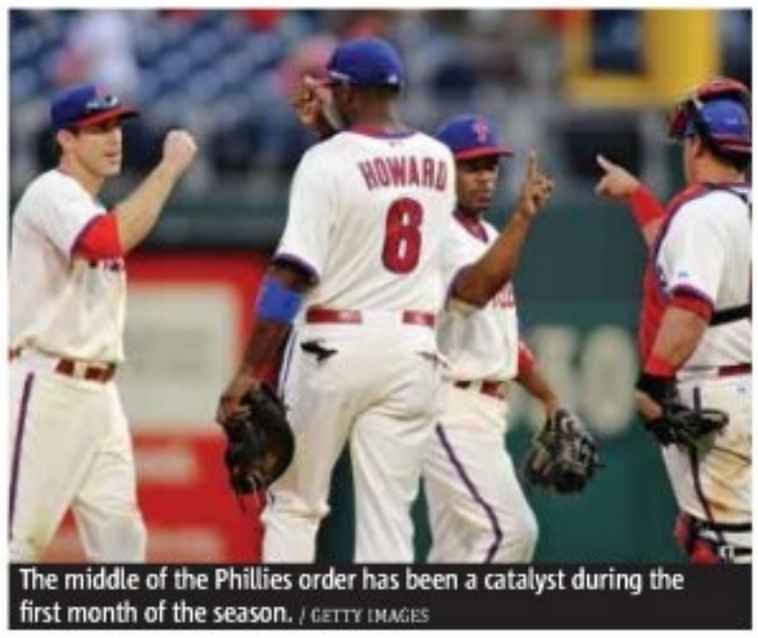
Phillies 'core four' are still producing

MLB. Chase Utley, Jimmy Rollins, Ryan Howard and Carlos Ruiz are healthy, and anchoring the Phillies' offense.



The middle of the Phillies order has been a catalyst during the first month of the season. / GETTY IMAGES

When the Phillies broke camp in March, an NL scout had a grim view of Ryne Sandberg's team.

"It doesn't look good," the scout said. "They can't hit. They're old. Chase Utley had his worst spring training ever. Cole Hamels is out for the first month. They might be the worst team in the league. They could be pretty far back in May."

Well, May has arrived and the Phillies are at .500, just four games behind the division-leading Atlanta Braves, who have the second-best record in the majors. Sure, a pessimist can say the Phillies are just a half-game ahead of the last-place Marlins — but there is hope.

Jimmy Rollins was right, as usual, with his proclamations when he uttered "who cares" when asked about poor spring training numbers. Utley looked like he was on the decline since he couldn't drive the ball or do much anything else with the bat during spring training.

However, when the season started he flipped a switch and put up Player-of-the-Month-worthy numbers. Not only is Utley hitting .355 with a .978 OPS, nearly half of his 33 hits are for extra bases. Utley already has 11 doubles. Only six players in the game have a higher WAR than Utley's 1.4.

"You don't have to worry about Chase," Rollins said. "Anybody that thought what they saw in spring training was going to spill over to the regular season doesn't know baseball. I'm not surprised at all about Chase."

Some may be surprised one month into the season that the Phillies core four, Utley, Rollins, Ryan Howard and Carlos Ruiz, aren't just healthy, but they're also productive.

Phils have room for improvement

MLB. The Phillies' bullpen and third basemen must step things up.

With the return of Cole Hamels, the Phillies' rotation is a strength. If Hamels, Cliff Lee and A.J. Burnett can go deep in games, that can only help a beleaguered bullpen.

The bullpen isn't the only issue. The Phillies have received scant contributions from its third baseman. The .160 average and .478 OPS from the hot corner is beyond anemic. Cody Asche has pressed and struggled. Freddy Galvis is simply overmatched at the plate and Jayson Nix is a virtual non-entity.

Cody Asche has been an offensive liability. / GETTY IMAGES

The Phillies hope to get increased production from third and from Domonic Brown. The enigmatic left fielder has middling numbers (.253 average, .630 OPS) and his absence of power hasn't helped the team. However, it looked like it could have been much worse a month ago as the Phillies flew to Texas to start the season.

"Don't underestimate the Phillies," Braves manager Fredi Gonzalez said. "If their guys stay healthy this season, they're going to be right in it. It would be foolish to take them lightly."

MLB. Phillies get back into swing of things with Nats on Friday

Vacation time came early for the Phillies this year.

Typically, teams don't have three off days in four days until the All-Star break. But due to two off days on the calendar and a rainout on Wednesday, the well-rested Phillies hope there isn't any rust when they host the Nationals in a three-game set beginning Friday night.

One luxury afforded to the Phillies is they can realign their rotation.

Cole Hamels struggled in the rain Wednesday in a 6-1 loss to the Mets in the Phils' only game played since Sunday, but the Phillies want to make sure Hamels, and the other top-line starters don't have to wait long before pitching again.

So Lee will go Friday night, Burnett Saturday and Hamels on Sunday.

Lee will face Stephen Strasburg in a matchup that could test the Phillies offense.

If Lee can get adequate run support, he could have success against the Nationals, who are without Bryce Harper and Ryan Zimmerman.

The three starters Ryne Sandberg will trot out this series are the best he has, but the bullpen is another story entirely. The pen has the worst ERA in the NL at 4.84. EVAN MACY

Cliff Lee / GETTY IMAGES

Probable starters

Some great pitchers' duels could take place this weekend at Citizens Bank Park starting with Stephen Strasburg on the hill.

- Friday: Stephen Strasburg (2-2, 4.24 ERA) vs. Lee (3-2, 3.29 ERA)
- Saturday: Tanner Roark (2-0, 2.76 ERA) vs. Burnett (1-1, 2.15 ERA)
- Sunday: Gio Gonzalez (3-1, 3.25 ERA) vs. Hamels (0-2, 6.75 ERA)
